

Italy

I am very glad that I could be one of the students who could travel to Italy.

The whole story started on the 11th of May 2013. We were a bit tired, but we successfully arrived at Ferihegy Airport, where we met the Rumanian students. After the checking-in I was very nervous as this was my first plane flight. I was lucky because I found a seat next to the window. The taking off was awesome. The view from the plane was breath-taking. A bit more than 2 hours later we arrived at the Airport of Naples, where a bus was waiting for us, which then took us to Nocera Inferiore. When we arrived at the town, my host family was waiting for me. We quickly got in their car and rolled to their house. We introduced ourselves, and while I was unpacking, the family was making the dinner. It was interesting to try out the Italian cuisine. It's different compared to our meals. First I thought that the family made it like that because I was visiting them, but later we visited a restaurant and it was the same.

On Sunday we spent the whole day at Naples, which was incredible. We saw the ocean, the city, and we could try the Margarita pizza, which was delicious. The Italian kids were friendly, they took us on a sightseeing tour, later they introduced us the Italian nightlife. It was strange that the streets were full even at night. The streets were narrow, and the drivers did not follow any rules. The kids in the school were happy and they wanted to know us. It's unbelievable how quickly we made new friends.

We visited Pompeii at the beginning of the week, we saw the old city, which was destroyed by the Vesuvius. On Tuesday we went to Amalfi coast, we visited the Paper Mill, where we could make paper. On Wednesday we got a fantastic lunch at the school with home-made foods.

In the afternoon we moved to Andria, where a completely new environment welcomed us. The people were calm and quiet. The welcoming family was smaller too. Their dog, named Celeste caused
