

I was given a chance by the Comenius programme to travel to the Czech Republic totally free. I spent there a week and I got unforgettable memories.

The biggest experience was meeting the people, who like folk music, songs and folk dances from different countries. The language skills could be developed well, in addition I could practise the Russian language as well, due to the fact that the Czech language is really similar to it. During this time, I made several friendships and since then I have been speaking with two of them every day.

I haven't been to the Czech Republic before, but everyone told me that it is an outstandingly nice country, mainly Prague. We spent half a day there. Although we couldn't see everything (it is said that it needs more than a week), but we admired the sights of the city centre.

On the 2nd day we travelled to the town where we spent the week. There were numerous useful programmes, e.g. singing and dancing workshops, where we could learn the folk culture of different nationalities.

All things considered, I can't mention any negative facts, however, there were some risky hours while we were travelling home...
