

In Bohemia

When I heard, that some students can travel abroad with the Comenius project, I felt very excited and later I felt very happy, because I heard that the topic will be the folk-dance and folk music. Folk-dancing and folk songs are very important in my life, so I signed up immediately, and for my luck I got an opportunity to go to Bohemia.

I was looking forward for the date of the travelling. We had a lot of preparation before the big adventure. We had extra singing and dancing lessons. One of the preparations was very interesting, we had to translate a traditional folk song to English.

We had a lot of programs in Bohemia. The first day we stayed in Prague in a hotel so we had the chance to see the beautiful capital city. Next day we went to our host families to Cesky Tesin. During this week I learnt a lot about the participating countries of the Comenius project. There were dancing and singing lessons, sightseeing and free programs. The last day there was a performance, where the students of each countries took part, so this was a good opportunity, where we could show our traditions with traditional costumes and also there was an extra production where we could sing and dance together.

During this trip we could develop and practise English, make new friends, and also we could learn about other cultures and different people.

In my opinion this was a very useful and special experience. I could learn about the traditions of other countries, I could also make new friends, I could develop my English and I could introduce our traditions to the other countries. I had two main programs this week. I taught everyone the dance of the Southern Great Plains and I sang and danced in front of the audience.

The Comenius project opens doors for students. In conclusion the project is very useful, important and effective.
